

Arrival of Cow at School May Get Pet Goat's 'Goat'

ELINOR JANNEY AND SYLVIA TAYLOR WITH DIMITY

Dimity's reign is threatened. Dimity, a goat, is the special pet of the pupils of the Rose Valley School—right now. They feed her oats and bring her water and put her up for the night in a shed on the school grounds. They play with her in between studies, and pet her when she's good. She's first in their affections—right now.

But they're expecting a cow. The 6-year-old pupils are studying the ins and outs of dairying, making a dairy farm—in miniature—AND, they're going to get a cow to make the project complete. Whether Dimity will resent this remains to be seen. You never can tell what a goat will do.

Nov. 9, 1935